

ADI

South East Asia

Adi has a passion for the people of South East Asia. Born in the region before moving to Australia as a child, Adi never saw the area as anything more than a cheap shopping destination.

On a visit back to her homeland, Adi was challenged by the ever-widening gap between the rich and poor, and, for many, the meaningless chasing of possessions and worldly treasures. She began to see her own people from a different perspective, and to understand a little of how she might help. However, commitments with her own busy lifestyle in Australia kept her from exploring this further.

After miraculously surviving a serious car accident in 2006, Adi knew that it was time to stop wasting time.

She opened herself up to new directions, and was amazed to see how clearly she was guided back to her own people.

Adi is spending 2008 working with a Global Interaction team in SE Asia. She says “I am learning to write my plans in pencil and let them be erased and re-written”.

Adi joins the Global Interaction team with a firsthand knowledge of the culture. With her local heritage, she is in a unique position to relate to her own people and empower them to enhance their living situations.
