

D and Z

Serving in South East Asia

D and Z have a passion for seeing people experience health and growth spiritually and physically.

Through their day-to-day contacts, they meet people who are struggling with social issues – poverty, disharmony, demonic torment, troubled dreams and spiritual confusion. They long to see these people experience wholeness and freedom. They therefore spend a lot of time talking with people, hearing their stories and, if requested, praying for them. They have found that on many occasions God communicates with people of this particular culture through visions and dreams.

There are many people whose lives have been radically changed and who have indeed found true whole-of-life healing as a result of this type of work. D and Z then nurture and train these people, and some are now developing similar patterns of work with other needy people who are experiencing new life.

One of their key goals is finding ways of expressing their own worldview and faith in ways that resonate within the local culture of the people around them. They therefore spend considerable time learning the local culture and language and trying to grasp at a deep level the worldview and the understanding of the sacred among the people they serve.

Their work is generally low key – quiet but effective!
